

Fw: Dogs on loose by moron owners..

Brian Carter

Sun 13/01/2019, 3:07 PM

To: Brian Carter <brian_carter1942@hotmail.com>

From: Brian Carter <brian_carter1942@hotmail.com>

Sent: Sunday, 13 January 2019 3:01 PM

To: Brian Carter

Subject: Dogs on loose by moron owners..

This is the reason many of us wonder why we work hard to help the earth remain healthy and the wild continue to serve all life. Morons like this.. Plus... Drink heavily then drive then lie.
.....Speed then gloat about it then lie..
.....Talk on mobile ph while driving then lie.
.....Cheat on family and friends gloat about it then lie.
.....Steal then gloat about it then lie.
.....Gluttony then lie to themselves and everybody else.
.....Take anything they want then lie.
.....Lie in court then gloat about it...
.....Smother the earth with billions of overpopulations of hoofed animals to turn the earth to dust then mud as it all ends up in the sea, smothering sea life, killing the barrier reef and all life rapidly as fresh air diminishes.
.....Most just really lying and trying to kill others.
.....Destroying the wilds right to live then making up a lie to cover their moron all about me behaviour.
.....Finding criminal behaviour great story for movie to impress the idiots as other idiots will always follow another
And so much more.
SO SAD AND SEEMINGLY IMPOSSIBLE TO CHANGE SUCH A SPOILT DUMBING DOWN SELF INDULGENT HUMAN RACE.

TH. DEC 20 2018
HERALD SUN.

UNITED STATES JOGGER BITTEN BY DOG OWNER

A jogger was attacked by a dog in a California park, but police say it was the dog's owner who left bite marks on her arm. The jogger attempted to defend herself from the dog's attack with pepper spray in Oakland, prompting the dog's 19-year-old owner to bite her. The biter caused "significant injury" and was arrested the following day, according to police. TNS

Twins Gypsy and Lulu, 7, do the right thing as they walk Kramer at Chelsea Beach. Picture: MICHAEL KLEIN

WILDLIFE PAYS AS DOG OWNERS IGNORE LEASH LAWS

MOST dog walkers are flouting Victoria's on-leash laws on beaches, endangering wildlife such as nesting birds, a Deakin University study has found.

The report surveyed 69 beaches from Mallacoota to Portland over three years and found that non-compliance was rife.

Associate Professor Mike Weston, from the Centre for Integrative Ecology, said many pet owners simply did not understand why an off-leash dog was a problem.

IAN ROYALL

"Maybe they're just not aware of the damage that dogs can cause to the environment, or because people have close personal relationship with their dogs they want their dogs to have free exercise and they see that as harmless," he said.

The study, conducted with BirdLife Australia, analysed compliance with four regulations: no-dog zones, seasonal leash access, time-restricted leash access, and dogs on leash at all times.

Dog owners who walked their dogs in on-leash-at-all-times zones were the worst offenders with a 79 per cent non-compliance record.

"Non-compliance is endemic along the Victorian coastline," he said.

Problems often occurred at quieter beaches, he said.

"We have seen that people are prepared to be lax when there's no one around. When there are non-dog walkers around, that can act as a social pressure."

Seals and sea lions that rest on beaches were also susceptible to barking dogs.

Newhaven Dog Walkers Group spokeswoman Jill Watt said her group encouraged responsible dog control but some owners believed their dog was too friendly to do any harm.

Prof Weston said inadequate signage could be improved.

The problem became so bad that Mornington Peninsula National Park was recently shut down to dogs completely because of people not keeping their dogs on the lead.

Port Phillip Bay was not included in the survey.